Slow season is saved by snow, resort owners say

by MARTHA PERKINS

For two years, people had the money to spend on winter vacations and there was little snow in the Highlands. This year, the economy is making people re-think holiday plans and there's lots of snow in the Highlands.

Tourism, like farming, is a tough business when so much of your success or failure depends on the weather.

The Haliburton Highlands Chamber of Commerce is answering about 10 inquiries a day, says administrative assistant Karen Eager.

"They're interested in cross country and most are looking for cottages. They don't want to pay for the Modified American Plan," she says. "Definitely they're looking for the cheaper way out, but there are some who don't care how much it costs."

"People are being cautious with their money," says D'Arcy McKittrick, general manager of the PineStone Inn. "They're unsettled. They want to go away but they're unwilling to make that commitment."

Whereas inquiries often turned

However, "it's a tough go right now" and PineStone has decided to trim operations in April, a traditionally slow time. "April has always been a lost month and given how tight the economy is, it doesn't make sense" to offer full services. The dining room will be closed, and meals will be available in the Golden Slipper.

"We've had our ups and downs. It's really maddening," says Curinto bookings in the past, McKittrick says more people are shopping around. The PineStone has reacted by developing special packages and services. "The product we're putting out is the best it ever was."

The Persian Gulf war is making people cautious about travelling overseas, but if they decide to spend their money in Canada instead, he doesn't feel the impact will be immediate. "A trip overseas is not going to be replaced by a weekend in Haliburton."

If it wasn't for the good snow conditions, McKittrick says the situation could be much worse.

tis Eastmure, the owner of Maple Sands Resort. For the first couple of weeks in January, he says people were glued to their television sets to watch news of the war, but February is picking up.

"The March Break looks good," he says. He's had three families who usually go down to Florida make their reservations for a winter Maple Sands visit. They say the costs are too high in the south and Eastmure is hoping the Americans, with all their fears of terrorism, will consider Canada a safe place to visit in the summer.

Minden council thwarting contract talks, union says

by MARTHA PERKINS

Ambulance attendants say Minden council is snubbing their attempts to resolve problems, thereby increasing the likelihood of a legal strike.

After a meeting with members of Local 314 of the Ontario Public Service Employees Union and provincial union representatives, local spokesman Ian Douglas says he attempted to meet with management.

"Council's response to this was to instruct management not to meet or discuss any issues with the representatives of the ambulance officers," Douglas says in a press release. "The workers feel that this is typical — when they want to discuss a problem, they are not listened to."

"If this attitude continues, an unnecessary strike will become unavoidable."

County attendants have been in a legal strike position since October, when all agreed to a strike vote. They have remained on the job, "hoping a solution could be found."

Attendants now earn $13.42 an hour and want $16.80. Reeve Ray Moore says the municipality offered around $15, "which was quite an increase to begin with."

In a telephone interview, Moore says the attendants' statements are "contradictory to the actual situation. The union laid out their final demand which was parity with the whole of Ontario, which would have been a horrendous situation for us."

Although the province pays 100 per cent of the costs, Moore says attendants are employees of the municipality. If attendants get paid $16.80 an hour, employees in other municipal departments will also expect pay increases, he says. This is not affordable.

As well, the municipality is worried that the province may eventually ask local taxpayers to pay 20

RB & D realtors still have faith in future

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Real estate agents with the former Rishor, Barnes and Dietrich are optimistic the future will be brighter in the upcoming week.

However, because of regulations under the Real Estate and Business Brokers Act, specific plans cannot be released yet.

Late last week, RBD was in obvious trouble. Phones were disconnected at the Peterborough, Lakefield, Haliburton and Bancroft offices. Details of RBD's financial fate are vague, but it's assumed the Peterborough-based company is insolvent.

This left local agents in a temporary lurch. Signs were covered up at the Haliburton office, although the telephone is now back in service.

"A good many (sales representatives) lost a good deal of money in commissions which may not be recovered," says Gary Badger of the Haliburton office. All deposits by law must be given to RBD, which then pays the agents their commissions. For Badger, the last commission cheque came in November, while for others it was before that. "The top producers have lost substantial commissions."

There is a recovery fund to compensate agents in such conditions, but it too has financial problems, Badger says.

RBD's collapse may be attributed partly to the slump in real SNOWMOBILING IS SOMETHING ambulance attendants prefer to do on their days off.

A few weeks ago, a call came in to the Haliburton base. A snowmobiler had had an accident and needed help.

It was 11 o'clock at night, a very cold night. Attendants Ian Douglas and Tammy English were on duty and hastily prepared everything they'd need. Although they knew the victim was accessible only by snowmobile, they didn't think about packing an extra layer of clothing.

Off they went. It took them half an hour by ambulance to reach the trail, and then 20 minutes by fast snowmobile to reach the accident scene.

"It's cold, the other snowmobilers are all upset, we're hanging on for dear life, and we don't know where we're going," Douglas remembers.

English also has clear memories of the cold. After they stabilized the victim and put him on a toboggan, she had to ride back on the toboggan to make sure that if he became unconscious, he wouldn't choke on his vomit. They had to go a lot slower because the man had internal injuries. He would later be taken to a Toronto hospital.

"When we got to the end of the trail, Ian had to help me off," says English, whose pants offered thin comfort against the cold. "I couldn't move and had lost all feeling in my toes. It was nerve wracking."

"That's part of ambulance service in a rural community," says Douglas.

Ambulance attendants in Haliburton County never know what to expect when the phone rings. And it's a strange sort of job, where hours can be spent wondering "Is the phone going to ring? Is there going to be an accident?" even though they know a phone call means someone is in distress.

But they say they became attendants because they like to help people, and they don't think they're doing much good watching television at the base.

They don't want to be walking with picket signs either. In a legal strike position, negotiations with the municipality of Anson, Hinton and Minden have stalled. The municipality administers the funds of the Haliburton County Ambulance Service, as set out by provisions of the Ministry of Health. (Decisions as to how the service operates are made by the Barrie office overlooking ambulance services.) All funds are paid by the ministry, but the municipality feels that as the employer, if attendants get the pay raise they're asking for, people in other municipal departments will want the same. There's also the chance the ministry will one day ask the municipality, through the county, to pay 20 per cent of the funds, just as local governments must pay 20 per cent of welfare costs.

Attendants want people to know there's more to their job than whizzing around in an ambulance.

Haliburton County Ambulance Services was two services until 1983: one administered by

Ukrainians are sad they had to leave

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

It was with sad hearts that a young Ukrainian family left Haliburton to return home on Sunday.

"They would love to stay but they can't afford it," says Mary Mysyk of Minden, acting as translator over the telephone for Natalia and Walter Savitski. "They have no real home, a visa for a year, their finances are down to $300 and he needs a work permit."

The couple arrived at her grandfather's, Walter Malarczyn's, home in mid-November. For years they had been saving money to leave Lvov, where they had to face daily line-ups for food and supplies — if the stores had anything to sell.

However, their arrival was unexpected and Mr. Malarczyn was not prepared for the cost of having four more adults stay in his home. (His son and grandson also came for a visit and have left.) After a story in The Echo, several people offered donations of food, but Mr. Malarczyn did not want to accept charity. Clothing and a baby stroller for little Olha, who was born in Peterborough on New Year's Eve, were accepted though. "The community helped them a lot and they are very thankful," translates Mary Mysyk. "They both really appreciate it."

At the last moment, the couple's only chance was to find a sponsor. But a call to the Oshawa Immigration Centre on Monday found that would not be an easy task.

Sponsors can be immediate family members living in Canada or Canadian organizations which have an agreement with the federal government, says manager Leighton Lee. Sponsors must be prepared to be responsible for supporting the immigrants. The candidates are first screened at a Canadian embassy — in the Savitskis' case, it would be the one in Moscow. Acceptance is based on whether they can communicate in English, have a job lined up, and job experience. If they can't speak English, Lee says their prospects are not good.

Even though Olha was born in Canada, that would have no bearing on their ability to immigrate, he says. "There's no claim that way."

The Ukraine is no longer on the list of countries for which political considerations are given, either. Therefore, the Savitskis cannot apply as "self-exiled persons designate" or political refugees.

"We receive a tremendous amount of applications," Lee says of the reasons behind the rules. "We can't possibly accept all of them."

THANKFUL FOR GIFTS: Although they had to leave Grass Lake on Sunday, Natalia and Walter Savitski were able to bring a little bit of Canada home to the Ukraine with them. Local residents donated lots of clothes and a stroller for them and their baby Olha, who was born New Year's Eve. The young family is very grateful.

MPP prefers jail term over paying a fine

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

Although he doesn't relish the idea, MPP Dennis Drainville said he'd rather go to jail than pay a fine for protesting in Temagami.

"When one does not believe one's actions have been wrong, to pay a fine is to agree with the finding of the court," Drainville said in a telephone interview. In December, he was found guilty of mischief for protesting against the extension of a logging road through what he believes is native land.

"I don't believe I've done anything wrong," he says.

If Drainville is fined and doesn't pay, the alternative is a jail sentence. "If it means going to jail, I'll go to jail. There are worse things in life — like not adhering to your conscience."

"I don't want to go to jail but the principle is far more important."

Drainville has appealed the conviction. The grounds of the appeal include protection of freedom of expression found in the Charter of Rights and Freedoms. As well, although fellow protestor Chief Gary Potts was acquitted because of "colour of right", the same judge did not find the same defense acceptable for Drainville.

The New Democrat MPP believes he is being dealt with severely because he has a seat at Queen's Park. However, at the time of the protest, he was acting as a citizen who has long spoken out for native rights and an Anglican priest, he said.

His guilty verdict in no way infringes on his role as an MPP. Sentencing is on February 13.

County's past is explored by Trent University students

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

Trent University students are helping Haliburton County learn more about itself.

In the next few weeks, the Canadian Studies students will be in the Highlands, asking questions, looking up documents and recording their findings.

Ideally, says the program's chairman, the community will one day be asking the students some questions.

"Our real interest is for the community," says John Wadland in a telephone interview. The project "is a vehicle for students to learn research methods, but we'd like to do it in a way that gives back to the community."

This is the second year the program has focused on Haliburton. One student last year studied early logging; another compared tourism in Muskoka and Haliburton, trying to determine local potential.

Subjects are even more varied this year. Painter Doris McCarthy's love of Highland forests is being documented by one student, while a diploma student from Germany is spending a lot of time at the Haliburton Forest and Wildlife Reserve, observing how the owners manage the 50,000 acres with "sustainable development" in mind. Old buildings are attractive to one student, and local artisans will be profiled by another.

Eventually, Wadland would like the community to come up with research topics. The students' efforts can be put to good use on projects local historical or environmental groups would like to pursue. Wadland hopes to arrange a meeting with interested local residents for this fall. Already he's been working a lot with Tom Ballantine at the Haliburton Highlands Museum.

"We'd like to get opinions of the kinds of work they would like to see us do . . . to accomplish the goals that are perceived by the community," says Wadland.

The interest in Haliburton County is natural for Trent University,

COMSOC outlines local service

The Ministry of Community and Social Services provides services to the people in Haliburton County the following ways:

Family benefits

The Haliburton office is in the Employment Centre (across from Raily's End Gallery) and is open from 1 to 3 every Wednesday for Family Benefits recipients. Those who live in Glamorgan, Dysart et al, Monmouth and Cardiff can contact their field worker every Monday in the Lindsay office at Zenith 21370 or the Haliburton office during Wednesday hours, 457-1840.

Recipients in Sherborne et al, Anson, Hindon and Minden and Lutterworth can contact their field worker Tuesday at the Lindsay office or at the Haliburton office during the Wednesday hours.

There is no Family Benefits office at the Minden CHACE daycare. For emergencies, call the Lindsay office at Zenith 21370.

Direct banking deposit

The ministry also provides an option for all recipients in the method of receiving benefits. A delay in mail delivery is less frequent in recent months. However, it still remains a problem. It now offers Direct Banking Deposit. For information, contact the office.

Daycare assessments

Daycare assessments can be arranged after setting up an appointment through the Lindsay office. Applications are completed in the Haliburton office every first and third Wednesday from 9:30 a.m. to noon and at the CHACE Daycare Centre every second and fourth Wednesday from 9:30 a.m. to noon.

Experience attendants' most valuable asset

Dysart, the other by Minden. Dysart gave up the service in the fall, and to finish out the fiscal year, the ministry delegated authority to Minden. No one at the Haliburton base knows why Dysart had to, or decided to, give up the service.

The service has a roster of 26 people, who form Local 314 of Ontario Public Service Employees Union. There are three staffed ambulances: two in Haliburton and one in Minden. In Haliburton, six attendants are full-time, nine are part-time. The service interim manager is Tim Masson and each base has a supervisor: Larry Martin in Haliburton and Randy Barras in Minden.

To become an attendant, people must pass courses in first aid and CPR and have a Class F driver's license. "In this service they like you to have experience as third man," says English, whose time as third man was shortened because she seems to have the knack of being on duty for the worst calls. She had a lot of experiences packed into a few weeks.

All full-time employees must pass their Emergency Medical Care Assistant program. It is a year-round course for day students, but it will take English two and a half years to complete it at night school in Bancroft. Her present courses include anatomy, emergency patient care, field experience, community health, and human relations. The cost is $1,700, which she pays herself.

Although the service tries not to have two part-time attendants on the same shift, there are some part-timers who are qualified to be full-timers.

The Ambulance Act clearly states what attendants are allowed to do. Among the things they're not authorized for are starting an IV, tracheotomies and defibrillation. They perform basic life support which is more extensive than that covered by regular first aid courses.

With the amount of time spent simply reaching people and then getting them to either the Haliburton or Minden Hospital, the attendants wish they were allowed to do more.

"People expect us to be paramedics but we can't be legally," Douglas says. To provide Advanced Life Support, the attendants must have a communications link-up with a trauma centre. This is impossible in the county, especially since doctors are only on call at the hospital. Right now, calls are dispatched through a communications base in Lindsay, which also services Port Perry, Beaverton, Bobcaygeon and Fenelon Falls.

For three shifts, attendants are staffing the bases or, depending on which ambulances are out on call, sitting in an ambulance on the Allsaw Flats. (The Haliburton attendants are against having a centralized base at the Flats because that would increase response time to Haliburton and north and east by 10 minutes.)

For the 1 a.m. to 8 a.m. shift, the attendants are on call. Those on duty must be at home and ready to respond immediately. One attendant has logged 23,800 volunteer hours in 11 years — hours when he made himself available to the service. Before the amalgamation of services, Dysart attendants averaged 3,000 hours of voluntary call-back time.

Chances are there will be calls on at least half of your 1-8 shifts, and English can remember the night she had three.

This makes it difficult for the part-time attendants, many of whom have full-time shifts elsewhere. Bosses must be accommodating when they get a phone call from an employee/attendant who had to drive to Toronto in the middle of the night and won't be in to work at nine. Or they've been up all night and come in tired.

"You're at home asleep, sound asleep, and you're ripped out of bed by a call on your beeper. You usually wake up about Tory Hill," jokes part-time attendant Dave Nimigon, who works full-time at the PineStone. Although this can make for a long week, Nimigon says when you're not on duty, you miss it.

"A lot of us have scanners which we listen to when we're not on duty because we want to know what's going on," says Douglas.

"We all enjoy what we're doing," says English, who must also do some juggling when work stretches beyond her eight-hour shift. With three young children, she depends a lot on the help of her husband and in-laws. It was her husband Bob who got her interested in the service to begin with: he's an attendant and "when it's part of your life all the time (as a spouse), you might as well join." Besides that, she thought it would be a pretty exciting job. And it is.

Summer, of course, is a lot busier than winter. No sooner than you're back from one call, the phone rings for another.

Because there are no large centres in the county, much of the attendants' time is spent transferring patients to larger hospitals, or from nursing homes to hospitals. Most calls are therefore low priority, and most high priority cases are heart attacks.

This means attendants often spend a lot of time with patients, who are grateful for the attention. One day, the crew was taking an injured man to Peterborough. His wife and son rode in the front, and it was discovered they had rushed out of the house with no money. Not wanting someone to be without funds, the attendant lent her some money, which she returned the next week. (There have also been occasions when attendants find themselves unexpectedly in Toronto with only a dollar in their wallet.)

But the local attendants have also dealt with their fair share of murders, suicides, family violence, bar fights and rapes. "If we know we're going into an unstable environment, we'll ask the OPP to be there," says Douglas.

Although they see people at bad times in their lives, the attendants are often warmed by people's reactions to them. "They're glad to see you — they know you're going to help," English says. Attendants are so intent on the job at hand, they

'We all enjoy what we're doing,' says ambulance attendant Tammy English, who would now find other jobs dull. Fellow attendant Ian Douglas agrees. 'A lot of us have scanners which we listen to when we're not on duty because we want to know what's going on'

don't dwell on the more gory side of their job — they don't have time. "As a spectator you'd think it was gross," says English, "but as attendants, we know there's no one else there who can do it."

But if my daughter cuts her finger, I almost get sick to my stomach."

Answering calls with children involved is the most difficult for the attendants, many of whom have children of their own. It's not unknown for them to cry once the call is over, and it is especially difficult when they know the victims.

Dealing with the distraught families can be the worst part of the call. "The family is asking so many questions — 'Is he okay?' — and you can't answer them. All you can say is 'I'm going to do all I can to help him.' ... It's hard listening to the families. You hear them crying and screaming but you know you've done everything you could."

The attendants also feel they are lucky to be working with such other dedicated professionals. Many fire departments have First Response teams, who provide an invaluable service when there are so many miles to cover. At the hospitals, the nurses are efficient and caring and "the doctors we have are all second to none," says Douglas. "We've got really good people here."

However, there is one group of people they don't appreciate: those who don't pull off to the side when an ambulance is coming. Unlike fire trucks, an ambulance's siren can only be used when there is a true emergency. So when the siren sounds behind you, the attendants are serious in their desire to pull ahead. There have been occasions when drivers appear to deliberately thwart the attendants' attempt to pass; many attendants have also been on the receiving end of many rude gestures by drivers.

"It's sad," says English. "You get so frustrated. Maybe they think it's nothing serious" but many valuable minutes have been wasted by inconsiderate motorists.

All in all though, the job has many rewards. And after dealing with such high-stress, traumatic experiences, the attendants admit other jobs would seem so dull.

KICKING UP THEIR HEELS: The Haliburton County Home Support Services Line Dancers show off their talent at Home Support's annual Senior Games at Deer Lodge on Monday. Some of the games played by the dozens of local seniors who attended included shuffleboard, euchre, bridge, bingo and Deer Races. But if you missed, not to worry. The next game day is set for March 2, again at Deer Lodge for those older than 55.

Attendants penalized for union

per cent of the costs, just as they must now pay 20 per cent of welfare and social services costs.

"We have to look ahead," says Moore. "We're not trying to be an ogre but as Haliburton County politicians, we've got to be darn careful. The provincial government is unloading a lot of services on our community."

Because the union sticks with the $16.80 figure, Moore says the argument never gets resolved. "We would only be too glad to sit down and go back to the bargaining table."

Another issue for attendants is hiring policies. They want a "commitment that present part-time employees will be considered for full-time jobs before outsiders are hired." The Ambulance Act gives a certain amount of time for a full-time attendant to become Emergency Medical Care Assistants, which is necessary for full-time positions.

Douglas says the attendants have been penalized for unionizing. In 1987, they tried to form a union under the Canadian Union of Public Employees, just as the Dysart and Minden services were amalgamating into the Haliburton County Ambulance Service. He says the municipality "lumped us in with everyone else" who worked for the municipality, and offered pay increases to the other departments in an attempt "to split us." It worked, but in June 1989, the attendants were successful in joining the Canadian Public Service Employees Union. Since that time they say their dental plan and Blue Cross benefits have been taken away.

WEATHER WATCH

Warm spell will end

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

Don't put away your winter woolies just yet. Colder weather is on the way for the weekend.

"This extremely warm weather we have been having for the last few days will gradually taper off by the weekend," says Haliburton weather watcher Jim Elstone. Temperatures should return to normal with day time highs around -5 Celsius and night time lows around -16 Celsius.

"Even with colder temperatures there doesn't appear to be much precipitation on the way. Very little, if anything."

Skiers might have appreciated some fresh snow to replenish the trails after this week's "Spring".

Sunday's temperature managed to reach 10 Celsius, breaking a 101 year-old record set in 1890. Monday's scorching high of 11 Celsius broke a record set in 1943.

A word of warning concerning ice conditions on the lakes: mild weather has severely weakened many inlets and outlets and Elstone suggests using caution.

Weather trivia: The coldest temperature ever recorded in the Soviet Union was reported last week, -73 Celsius in Ustneria. The warmest spot was Geraldton, Australia, with 115 Fahrenheit.

The coldest day recorded in Canada was on February 3rd, 1947 in the Yukon, the temperature was -63 Celsius.

Protestors asked to pay fees

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

After a lengthy court battle, the Victoria Board of Education wants to have its legal fees paid for by its combatant in court, the Save Our Schools (SOS) Committee.

At the board's January 29th meeting, SOS member Laura Janke said "A decision to end the conflict would be truly appreciated by myself. For you to re-consider the $15,000 legal attempt would go a long way in restoring confidence in our communities."

Four years ago, she and other residents of Victoria County formed SOS to prevent the board from closing five northern schools to build two centralized schools.

Those who signed the SOS petition went to court to fight the board, but lost. The board decided SOS should pay its $15,000 legal costs as well as their own.

"For me the battle is over," wrote Janke. "I will not be re-activating the SOS or be involved in any future attempts to stall the new school from being opened. This long battle has been expensive, not only in time and money but in frayed nerves and quick words."

Lanke received support from the Council of the United Townships of Laxton, Digby and Longford. They sent the board a letter which said, "Government agencies are supposed to provide wanted and needed services to the general public, not use their position to seek revenge."

The board will make a decision at its next meeting.

Government doesn't help resort owners

notes, and their visit depend a lot on snow conditions. Before bookings, they phone to find out what the ski trails are like.

"It's economics when you get right down to it," says Hart Lodge owner John Mateer. "They're calling with more questions about price. They're shopping around."

People have more money in the bank than they did before, but they're afraid to spend it. In the fall it was the uncertainty about interest rates and the GST. Yet the new federal tax isn't turning out to be as much of a problem as he expected. "There's no fight against it. People are accepting that it's a fact of life and there's no animosity towards the people who have to charge it."

Some of the cottage businesses are reaping the benefits of the economic downturn. Joachim Matysek of Sandy Lane Resort says his cabins are booked every weekend in February, although mid-week is still light.

"Price is a part of it," he says, but he believes guests also like the flexibility and privacy a self-contained cottage provides. They can eat when they want to and don't have to worry about neighbours if they stay up late.

"Three things hurt tourism," Matysek says: "The weather, the economy and the government." The latter provided a "one-two punch" with the introduction of the GST and resulting slow down of the economy.

"January was slow but February seems to be picking up," says Lorna McMaster, a new owner of Willow Beach Cottages. At the first of the year, everyone was recovering from Christmas and the uncertainty of the GST. As well, the weather warms up in February, which appeals to those who like to spend part of their vacation outside.

Most guests are couples rather than families, and a main attraction is the nearby cross country ski trails, she says.

Something was obviously wrong at the Rishor Barnes and Dietrich office in Haliburton. It's hoped problems will soon be sorted out estate. Sales started to decline in late 1989 as the economy worsened and interest rates went up.

"Everything was just dead"—it was almost non-existent," Badger says of the recent local market. In January, the Wilberforce and Haliburton RBD agents sold three or four properties; in a good January, they would sell eight or 10.

Now the market is correcting itself as prices come down, and many are saying it is now stabilized. The previous high prices

"were proper for the market that prevailed at the time, but that market no longer prevails. We were riding high, Haliburton was just a booming."

In the past week, interest rates have come down, which has created more optimism about potential sales.

Despite the problems, the former RBD agents want to stay together. "We're known as the happy office," says Badger. "We're cohesive. That's the way we all feel."

"We all believe in it," says fellow agent Nick Lawrence.

Lutterworth quiet on MVA

With less than a minute of discussion, Lutterworth council deferred making a decision on the proposed county wide re-assessment.

"Does anyone want to voice their opinion on this?" asked Reeve Carol Puffer at Tuesday's meeting.

"I think we have all said enough," said councillor Lisa Mercer. "Let's put it to a motion."

Council unanimously passed a resolution to hold off making a decision on the re-assessment until its full impact can be studied.

Contractors cautious in their predictions for upcoming year

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

It's too early to tell how 1991 will shape up economically, but local contractors and suppliers are optimistic.

"I'm not a negative person and am fairly optimistic," says John Robinson of J.D. Robinson Construction in Haliburton.

He says the fall and winter have not been too bad for his business and is hopeful falling interest rates will help boost business the coming summer.

"Last spring and summer were flat," he says. "If interest rates take a good drop, that should stimulate some new growth."

Nothing has opened yet, but his confidence is high. "I think it's different for me. I have been around a long time and I have built up a clientele and when times are tougher I get a lot of referral work," says the contractor.

"But right now it's way to early to tell anything."

This feeling is shared by most other contractors. "We seem to be right on par with last year," says Rick Elstone of Elstone Construction in Haliburton. "This year may not be too bad."

But he says the introduction of the Goods and Services Tax (GST) may scare off a lot of potential customers until they see the effects it will have.

"The GST is another thorn in the ointment," says Robinson. "But in the construction trade, it won't have that much impact."

He says the net effect of the tax should only cause a 2 to 3 per cent difference for consumers. In many cases lumber will drop in price when the federal sales tax is taken off.

"It remains to be seen," says Kim Emmerson of Emmerson Lumber in Haliburton. Since lumber is a commodity, its price is always fluctuating and manufacturers always raise the price January 1st. He says in many cases the price will even out, but in general drywall is one third less than it was two years ago.

"I'm not a pessimistic person," he says. "Interest rates are a little lower and I'm sure cottagers will be back."

Robinson agrees and says the baby boom generation is now more interested in fixing up the old family cottage than building a new one. "Young families with a home want to upgrade their parents' cottage. In the long run, the next wave could be bigger for us than in the last four or five years," he says.

But most contractors are cautious in their predictions. "I never know what it will be like until it happens," says Del Sharp of Sharp Electric in Haliburton. "In my business I never take anything for granted."

Despite getting reassurances from possible customers who say they are interested in having work done, Sharp says he never knows if the jobs will pan out until he is actually set to begin. "A lot of things can change in the meantime."

Like the rest, Sharp is optimistic but is waiting to see what the next few months will bring.

Trent students are studying county

Wadland says. His department owns a 24-acre complex on Kushog Lake, which was donated by the late Dr. Mary Northway. She was a Toronto psychologist with strong ties to the area. The property was her girls camp in the late 1930s. (Her estate also donated $13,000 to the chronic care unit fund.)

Trent has always focused on Canadian studies and the environment, and faculty and students made many forays to the camp when Dr. Northway was alive. Wadland's predecessor, Allen Wilson, had also written a biography of Dr. Northway's grandfather, John Northway, who had founded a department store.

"She decided we had the right spirit in mind," Wadland says of why she donated the property to the university. Now the land is used as a retreat for small conference groups. "There's a real dedication to see it's kept up."

The students' efforts, therefore, are "part of Trent's responsibility to serve the community."

It's also hoped the reports will one-day be published. However, right now the students are primarily building up a base of knowledge.

What's fair?

The impasse in contract negotiations between Haliburton County Ambulance attendants and the Municipality of Anson, Hindon and Minden, which administers the local service on behalf of the provincial health ministry, is significant for at least two reasons. Firstly, protracted negotiations — or the abandonment of talks altogether — could lead to a strike by attendants. They have been in a legal position to walk off the job since October, when they voted to withdraw their services should talks between their union and management fail. A strike could have deadly consequences for anyone who is injured or suffers sudden, serious illness. Secondly, the key issue of wages highlights the frustration many people feel when confronted by the significant gap between public sector wages and those determined by the local marketplace.

Full time ambulance attendants in Haliburton County presently earn $13.42 an hour. Their counterparts elsewhere in Ontario earn $16.80. The local attendants are seeking parity, but Anson, Hindon and Minden is balking, and according to reeve Ray Moore, has offered wages approaching $15 an hour. Why should council care, since attendants' wages are paid by the Ministry of Health through taxes levied on Ontario businesses? Aside from council's obligation to act responsibly in spending the taxpayers' money, Reeve Moore argues that paying ambulance workers $16.80 an hour could lead to similar wage demands from other public sector employees, such as municipal roads workers. Moore also worries that the province may soon pass a portion of the cost of the local service back to municipalities, a policy the government has established for education, roads and welfare, among other services funded by taxpayers.

It could be argued that the ambulance attendants are fully justified in asking to be paid the same wages as attendants in other nearby communities. After all, their training and responsibilities are identical. So too, in almost every respect, is the cost of living. And since the responsibilities of ambulance attendants differ dramatically from those of road workers, the municipality should not be concerned about road workers demanding similar increases.

It could also be argued, however, that council is right to be cautious about giving in too readily to wage demands that far outstrip those that can be paid in the private sector. Most local business owners would be only too happy to pay their most productive employees $16 an hour, or even more, if they could generate enough revenue to cover those wages and leave a healthy and necessary margin of profit. The realities of the marketplace dictate otherwise, however. Most local business would quickly go bankrupt if they could not keep wages more closely attuned to revenues than do provincial and federal government agencies. For example, few local businesses could afford to pay their best office workers $13.60 an hour plus four weeks of vacation pay and other benefits, yet that is the wage offered by the Ministry of Natural Resources for someone to answer the phone and type an occasional letter at the Frost Centre. If there were more such taxpayer funded jobs available, small business would be out of business, because the wage bears no relationship to productivity and ability, as the private sector defines them. Anson, Hindon and Minden council cannot be unaware of this dilemma. In fact, as the owner of a small business enterprise, reeve Ray Moore is no doubt acutely attuned to the relationship between wages, expenses, revenues and profits. Minden council may not be able to do much about the yawning gap between public sector profligacy and the recession induced belt tightening of private enterprise, but neither can they ignore that reality and serve the interests of local taxpayers.

In the end, Minden councillors may have to bend to arguments from the union and move local attendants toward parity with their counterparts in other communities. But council is right to be cautious, and to try, as much as they can, to keep public sector wages in line with the costs that the local marketplace, and local taxpayers, can bear.

War of many colours

To the Editor:

I feel nothing but total disgust and shame, when reading, Letters To The Editor Wed. Jan. 30/91 re: Coghlan, Senitt, Christophers. The shame, because they're supposed to be Canadians and North Americans. Things aren't just black and white, they're sometimes grey.

Before I'm branded a war monger, I must confess that every night I pray for peace, — BUT not at any cost. Ms. Coghlan wrote: "when war was mentioned, world unity fell apart." There were a few heads of state, who thought we should give Iraq a while longer to make a decision but not one UN nation reneged on the final decision. Coghlan stated that the coalition force would destroy global life! Who was it that dumped 11 million barrels of oil into the Gulf? The biggest marine disaster in world history? She says, she's been stripped of her faith and pride! The actions and bravery of our men in the middle East makes my chest swell, with pride and honour. She stated, that, there is no honour for a man, who wages war for peace. One of the wisest scholars in history stated, nearly 500 years ago, when dealing with a tyrant, there can be no lasting peace, without war.

Does Mr. Senitt know that the largest neutral country in the world, (proclaiming peace at all cost) Sweden, has sold more military equipment and technology to the Middle East, than the rest of us combined?

My view of solving this problem, is to restrict the sale of arms to ANY country in the Middle East, with a contingent of UN personnel to enforce it.

Mr. Senitt says he does not want to shame those fallen in past wars, and prays it will never happen again. In 1939, there was a man called Hitler, who was left unchecked for quite some time. The pacifist outlook dictates that they should not be concerned with the oppression and affairs of smaller weaker countries. Before a man, by the name of Churchill came on the scene, half of Europe had been eaten up by the tyrant, and a few million Jews had been eliminated.

To my way of thinking, Hussein is a re-incarnation of Adolf Hitler.

Six million Jews all killed in the 1940s by Hitler; in 1991, 200 Kuwaiti babies are killed by Hussein's orders. This was reported as a fact by CNN news. I believe those 200 babies are enough to go to war over, forget about the oil.

Christophers: the Free Trade Act has made Canada just another poor state. The Americans are having just as hard an economic time as we Canadians and I'm sure they can't blame the FTA on that. In my opinion, in the near future the FTA will be a blessing for the Canadian economy.

The Christophers believe that President Bush took advantage of the situation and started the war, with the expectations of boosting a sagging economy. It seems to me, that I recall Pres. Bush, as well as several other prominent statesmen from all over the world, plead with Hussein for a peaceful retreat from

THIS COMING WEEKEND you will have the opportunity to drive around the Loop and visit Wilberforce, Tory Hill, Gooderham, Harcourt and Highland Grove and take in the Loop Winter Carnival at each and everyone of the stops. The big weekend kicks off in Highland Grove on Friday night at 7:00 p.m. with a Welcome Party and Bonfire and ends at Wilberforce at 4:00 p.m. with Cross Country Skiing. During these three days there are so many events that it's impossible for me to list them here in this week's column. Activities will be the order of the day in all five villages with never a dull moment as a new event comes up each and every hour. Winter Carnival Mascot Snow "Buddy" will be making appearances throughout the weekend. Join Buddy in all the winter fun. Displays of snowmen and other snow sculptures by businesses, individuals and groups are encouraged (if snow conditions are right). Turn your outside lights on for the Carnival. For further information on any weekend events contact: Hilda Clark at 448-2018, Pat Furneau at 448-2077 and Elva Bates at 447-2410 (Gooderham.) It's all going to come together this weekend Friday, Saturday and Sunday, February 8, 9 and 10.

The Haliburton Minor Hockey Association is $1,760. richer today after receiving the proceeds from the Saturday, January 27 exhibition hockey game between the 1968-69 All Ontario Bantam Hockey team (Haliburton's first All Ontario Championship) and the present 1990-91 Haliburton Bantam team. A crowd of between three and four hundred hockey fans attended the game and were treated to a fast action enjoyable game. The money raised in this game will help to meet the Association's expenses without going to the local business people for money. The minor hockey executive is very pleased with the fact that the local hockey association is paying its own way.

We are sorry that we had two errors in the caption under the picture of the 1968-69 Bantam Hockey team that appeared in our January 30 edition. The name Tom Curry should have read Tim Curry and Larry Robinson was unable to be here for the game and the player in the photo was Larry LaPorte.

Several people from Haliburton and surrounding area were in Huntsville on Saturday to help Wallace and Eileen Little celebrate their 50th Wedding Anniversary.

Friends of Gwen Cameron and Lee Blair wish them both a return to good health after suffering heart attacks last week.

Figures were released by the National Hockey League Players Association and they listed the 1990-91 salaries for the 100 highest paid NHL players. Wayne Gretzky is the highest paid player in the NHL at $3.3 million this season, but only seven others make $1-million or more according to a survey by the NHL Players Association. Other players in the $1-million-plus class are Mario Lemieux of Pittsburgh, Brett Hull, St. Louis, Steve Yzerman, Detroit, Denis Savard, Montreal, Patrick Roy, Montreal, Ray Bourque, Boston, Scott Stevens, St. Louis. Of interest to local hockey fans is the name of Steve Larmer who toils for the Chicago Black Hawks who is listed Number 14 in the highest-paid players list is making $750,000 per year and Bernie Nicholls of the New York Rangers who is listed in the number 28 spot earns $545,000 per season.

Here, there and everywhere... Art Dawson of Haliburton has returned home following a vacation in Jamaica... We are sorry to report that Besse Cox, an employee at the Minden Times, is at present a patient at Civic Hospital in Peterborough. We wish her a speedy recovery... Friends of Sinc Nesbitt also of Minden hope that he will soon be back on his feet again after suffering a heart attack recently.

Each week I try to bring you up to date on what's happening in regard to the Haliburton Winter Carnival which will be coming your way on the February 15-16 and 17. A new event this year will be the Cross Country Ski Race which will begin on the main street and we understand that the organizers are expecting well over 100 skiers to take part. They are hoping that this will be an annual event with the possibility of having 400 to 500 entries in the not too distant future. Plenty of activities have been lined up for the children and they will be under the direction of Steve Heming of Camp Wanakita. It will all take place at Head Lake Park. For the first time, this year's winter extravaganza will feature Bingo at the Legion Hall on Saturday at 1:00 p.m. with a $500 Jackpot. At 8:00 p.m. on Saturday evening, the Heart and Stroke Foundation Dance is set for the Legion Hall with music by the ever popular local group "Ugly Rumour".

POINTS OF VIEW

THE VIEW FROM HERE

TRAVELLING IN THE U.S. leaves you remarkably devoid of news from home. When we get to Florida, there's "Canada News," of course, and with a shipment of back Echo editions, I'll eventually have the cross-country picture as well as the local one.

While I read weekly and daily papers in each area I travel through, I also get "USA Today," which carries an overview of what goes on all over. Mostly Canada gets mentioned in the sports pages — stories about problems caused by rising interest rates at the SkyDome, details on Blue Jays signings and trades, lists of NFL players who once played in the CFL. That sort of thing.

A couple of recent items reminded me of monster trucks, and made me wonder what the Ontario government might have done in this particular area. (I admit it's been a pet topic of mine, but the last passing reference was some five months ago, the week after the election).

The first reminder was a comment by Jay Leno on the "Tonight" TV show about the Savings and Loan fiasco down here, to the effect that "some of them were so broke they couldn't afford to buy their own congressman," which made me think of former Ontario Transport Minister Bill Wrye, whose policy flip-flop allowed them in Ontario.

The other was a TV news story about an ice storm in northern Arizona where three members of a family of four were killed and one child left alive, but seriously injured. A transport trailer had landed on their car, the announcer said matter-of-factly.

The last thing I read in Canada was a story in a trucker's paper at a gas stop that said that Liberal Bill 96, allowing trailers up to 53 feet — 70-foot-long trucking units — died with the government. However that wasn't the end of it!

In spite of the fact the legislation had never been passed, current permits for oversized units would still be valid — and renewable for up to 12 years. Not only that, but the ministry was planning to issue additional permits — up to the 2,000 the Liberals had approved — until the last day of 1990.

I read this at a truck stop near Chatham, and I can tell you there were a lot of biggies on the 401 from there to Windsor, but darned few of them had Canadian plates. I hope when I get back home, I will find that the current Ontario government have had the good common sense to make the transport department rescind this particularly stupid policy.

I have learned quite a bit more about the big rigs on the south side of the border. First of all, I have found that there is a battle between the safety people and the automobile associations and the truckers' lobbying groups down here similar to the one first won — then lost — in Ontario.

Triple trailers — 28-footers, making a highway train up to 110 feet long — are allowed in 14 states, and 'turnpike doubles' — two 48-footers plus tractor adding up to 120 feet — are legal in 15 states, although five of these restrict them to interstate highways, where they're only passing through.

These longer rigs are, of course, the avowed aim of the truck lobby in Canada, and the U.S. group have apparently 'worked their way up' a little bit at a time, state by state, over here. With them go special adjustments to weight limits, and if we think our roads are pounded out by overweight rigs in Ontario, you should see some of the American roads.

We have been on a number of stretches of road where trucks are required to travel in the LEFT lane, because the right-hand lane is so rutted and broken up. The government is apparently trying to preserve what's still good until they can get some money up to repave the whole thing.

We have travelled in ten of the 15 states so far, and, while we avoided rain for seven straight weeks, earlier in our trip across through Indiana, Nebraska, Utah, Idaho and Oregon we had real-life experience in rain, wind and fog with these monsters swaying past you at high speeds.

Our motor home is only 20 feet long, but it is slab-sided, and in a wind we know what the effect of even the 70-footers can be. The rain throw-back is another factor to contend with — and I wouldn't even want to think of what they're like in snow, or sleet, or on icy roads.

They don't need the problems they create down here, and we sure don't need them in Ontario. I hope someone tells Bob Rae.

Some noisy winter days

DOWN OUR ROAD

SHARON LYNCH

'MY HEAVENS BUT IT'S NOISY today!" Maude said outloud, shaking more seeds into the bird feeder. The chickadees were so bold they didn't even wait until she moved away before hopping onto the tray. It was a beautiful Saturday but almost too warm. By mid-afternoon the lake would probably be reduced to much. The poker run was on and it was the constant hum and whine of the snowmobiles that caused Maude's complaint. Like an army of black ants, a line of machines could be seen crossing the lake. There'd be a gap, then maybe two or three stragglers, then another battalion would zoom into sight. They all looked the same against the white snow. It was only when they got closer that different colours and shapes could be picked out. The best weather for snowmobiling was colder than this mild day however. The machines performed better in the cold and people didn't end up sweating under their suits and helmets as was the case today.

Although she didn't like the noise, Maude knew it would probably continue all day despite the warm temperatures. And having just gone through December and January, this spring-like day was too good to resist, noisy or not. So she took one of the lawn chairs out of the garage and set it up on the shore of the lake. A huge mug of coffee in her hand, Maude donned her sunglasses and sat down to soak up a few rays and enjoy the fresh, moist air. She knew the weather could change overnight but for now she closed her eyes and pretended that spring was just around the corner. All that was needed to make her day complete was to pick it up and move it to the middle of the week. But being a Saturday, and the poker run to boot, peace and quiet were impossibilities.

Despite her grumbling, she didn't really mind. Snowmobiles had done a lot for this part of the country. They had changed the economy from seasonal to year-round. People who had never dreamed of using their cottage in the winter now contemplated eventual retirement in the area. And for those who craved escape from the same old travelled route, the snowmobile opened a whole new range of vistas.

Maude thought back to the old days when she was growing up by the lake. There were only a handful of cottages back then, compared to the hundreds that now dotted its shores. Then, as more land was sold to developers, cottages started to spring up. Roads were built and improved so that the summer residents could get around more easily. Not everyone was prepared to travel by boat, though some started out that way. Anything as fanciful as a snowmobile hadn't even been thought of back then. Most cottages didn't even have insulation or indoor plumbing. Putting aside the thought of a cold and drafty seat first thing in the morning, without hydro a toilet was an impossible luxury.

Coal oil lamps, outdoor privie sand ice boxes. Maude chuckled to herself. She had loved the ice box. It always seemed such a mystery the way that ice could last a whole week. Granted it did shrink down to almost nothing, but for seven days it kept cold the milk, butter, eggs and whatever else her mother put into it. The ice house used to be right down beside the lake, so once the big blocks were cut, the men didn't have far to haul them. Her cousin's ice house had been back in the bush, nicely shaded all right, but a lot farther from the lake. Maude always thought their own arrangement made much more sense.

Even on the hottest summer days that ice house was deliciously cool. If the ice box in the kitchen was a bit of a mystery to the young Maude, the ice house defied nature itself in her mind. Yes, it had been explained that the sawdust kept the ice from melting. But she didn't really understand how it accomplished this feat. She just couldn't really, truly comprehend how the tiny pieces of wood, shavings really, that were scattered all over the mill and appeared on the floor of the shed when her father was working out there, how this special dust kept ice solid. She used to sneak into the ice house on hot July afternoons, lift up the tarp and scratch the sawdust with her fingers until they went numb with the cold. Then a grenney piece of the ice would shine through where she had scraped and she would marvel at its cold, slick surface.

Winter or not, you'd need sawdust to keep the ice from melting on a day like today, Maude thought, shifting her weight in the deck chair and turning her face more toward the sun. A snowmobile roared by not far from where she sat and she jerked in her chair. She must have dozed off for just a moment. Obviously the warm weather had discouraged some of the snowmobilers because the caravan of machines had slowed down enough for her to cat nap. Thinking of the ice house, sawdust and noise, suddenly brought back another memory.

Every year the ice house would eventually empty and stand waiting to be filled. The ice would form nicely on the lake and before long it would be ready to cut and pile in the house. But first the sawdust had to be broken up. It had become wet over the months it covered the ice and when the weather turned cold, the sawdust turned into a solid mass. Now back in those days, anyone living in the country had dynamite on hand, for blowing up tree stumps and like jobs. What better way to break up the frozen sawdust than to blow it apart?

For some reason that Maude never did find out, the men let some friend of a friend look after the dynamiting one year. She decided afterwards that no one wanted to admit it had been their idea to let him do it. To some people, dynamite may seem like a pretty primitive, unexceptional substance compared to the explosives of today. But make no mistake about it, dynamite could really pack a whollop. Anyway, this friend of a friend took one look at the sawdust frozen hard as concrete and decided one stick of dynamite just looked too puny. He figured if one stick of dynamite was good, two would be even better.

Well, that was the end of the old ice house. It was so damaged that they had to tear the rest of it down. The sawdust was not only broken up but most of it ended up scattered halfway across the lake. They said the blast was heard all the way to Eagle Lake. It made the roar of a snowmobile sound like a baby's sigh by comparison. Not too long after that the hydro came in and they never rebuilt the ice house. 'I guess that's what you call progress,' sighed Maude, as another machine sloshed by her patio chair.

MORE LETTERS

FROM ECHO READERS...

Kuwait. Nothing else, just get out of Kuwait. The dummie Hussein left the UN secretary-general, sit waiting for him for five hours, and then took ten minutes to say. No deal.

Mulroney, without a doubt, in my opinion, is one of the worst Prime Ministers in Canadian history, but at least he had enough guts to commit our armed forces immediately and to make the rest of us look like a bunch of pussies, looking for a free ride.

Christophers said sanctions were not given enough time, but you can bet, Hussein and his elite troops would have lasted for years. Mind you, most of the kids and peasants would have starved to death in a couple of months.

Why should Hussein travel 12000 miles to attack North America? If not stopped he would have taken over the entire Middle East oil supply, and crippled the entire world, not only USA. His terrorist attacks in North America and around the world, would have been the icing on the made man's cake.

The Christophers stated that Canada is owned, lock stock and barrel by the US and that in fact, our real enemy is to our south, only but a few miles.

Canada's enemy as well as the world's, is in the small minds of people, like those mentioned in this letter.

If God could but grant me one wish, it would be for a free and peaceful world, but, I would not tolerate one bully's fanatical dreams to gain that peace.

Haven Cook,
Haliburton.

We live in a global neighbourhood

To the Editor:

I was moved by the simplicity and truthfulness of Rolan Abraham's words in Memories of War. Also, in the column We All Know What Makes A Good Neighbour, you wrote about the important role that religion plays in fostering goodwill within a community. I agree. To take it further, I believe that when the Biblical tenet "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you," is extended to our global community, we can and will be able to bring about the long awaited peace. This simple golden rule is a teaching that can be found in all the great religions. May I share some of them:

Judaism: "What is hateful to you, do not to your fellow men. That is the entire law, all the rest is commentary."

Zoroastrianism: "That nature only is good when it shall not do unto another whatever is not good for its own self."

Islam: "No one of you is a believer until he desires for his brother that which he desires for himself."

Taoism: The good man "ought to pity the malignant tendencies of others; to rejoice over their excellence; to help them in their straits; to regard their gains as if they were his own, and their losses in the same way."

Baha'i: "It is Our wish and desire that every one of you may become a source of all goodness unto men, and an example of uprightness to mankind. Beware lest ye prefer yourselves above your neighbours."

If humanity paid heed to this spiritual principle common to all religions, there could be no prejudices; man and woman would be considered equal; extremes of poverty and riches could not exist; religion would become complementary rather than competitive and "unbridled nationalism" would have to give way to "a wider loyalty, to the love of humanity as a whole." We cannot avoid the fact that the world has become a single neighbourhood and that we have the potential and the means to make it a peaceful one.

Lynn Duncombe,
Haliburton.

Government needs to be changed

To the Editor:

Our glorious leader, Mr. Brian Mulroney, just said that the cost of the Gulf war is more expensive than they thought — more planes, more men, and a field hospital. Our great leader in his wisdom will be looking for more money. You know where it's going to come from. He knows the unemployed people can afford a little more money, but don't forget the elderly people with their big pension's can afford it. Our honorable leader can raise the G.S.T. from 7 to about 10 percent, if were lucky maybe only 9 percent.

Watch your gas prices, cottagers watch your reality taxes. The possibility is unlimited what our honorable leaders may do. Don't forget the war tax that they may put on us. Our honorable leaders did this at the start of the second world war, but for some strange reason they forgot to take it off after the war. We are still paying this tax. Don't forget the smokers; they can also pay their share.

I think a change in government is in order. The sooner, the better.

Ed Stukas,

Bantams open series with big Gravenhurst win

Haliburton's J. D. Robinson Construction Bantams opened their best of five series with Gravenhurst on Friday night, after losing the toss for the odd game at home. The boys settled down to play their familiar high scoring style of hockey and won the game by an eight to four count.

At the end of the first period it was 4-3 for Haliburton, and they added two goals each in the second and third to lead 8-3 before Gravenhurst replied with one in the final minute of play.

Goal scorers for Haliburton were Corbie Kent, Kevin Morissette, Jonathan Bishop and Mark Morissette.

The first home game was scheduled for Tuesday night, February 5, with another home game Tuesday, February 12 if necessary.

MNR wants owners to control their dogs

The Ministry of Natural Resources, Minden District, wants dog owners to realize the importance of maintaining control of their pets.

Deep snow in much of the District this year is restricting deer's ability to move, and combined with the cold weather, make it a very demanding time of year.

Domestic dogs, which often travel in groups, take this opportunity to roam and participate in the thrill of a deer chase, which often results in the death of the deer through injury or exhaustion.

During the winter months, the deer are vulnerable to harassment. As well as receiving leg injuries from crusted snow, a prolonged chase results in high energy consumption for deer already under the stress of winter. This can lead to the death of deer even without being attacked. Females are extremely sensitive to unnecessary exertion and the added stress of pursuit can lead to aborted fawns.

During this critical period for deer, the MNR asks the co-operation of all dog owners in protecting the deer herds by not allowing their pets to roam unattended. The Game and Fish Act allows a Conservation Officer to destroy any dog found running deer and provides a penalty to a maximum of $25,000 for the owner of a dog found running at large during the closed season for deer or chasing deer.

The public can also assist by reporting any dogs observed chasing deer by contacting the Minden District Office of the Ministry of Natural Resources at 705-286-1521.

Give the deer a break! Please keep your dog tied up.

Midgets in tight spot in middle of their playoffs

Haliburton's OMHA Midgets have their backs to the wall in their best of five playoff series against Warkworth, trailing two games to one after splitting back-to-back matches over the weekend.

Haliburton travelled to Warkworth on Saturday, January 23 for the series opener, and came out on the losing end of an 8-4 score. Jason Billings accounted for three of Haliburton's goals, with Jamie Dollo driving in the other.

Game two, played at the Dysart arena on Saturday, was an exciting match, with the local boys winning 8-4 in overtime.

Haliburton got on the scoreboard late in the first period as Dollo found the mesh, assisted by Reid Elstone and Jason Billings. Early in the second period Derek Wilson scored unassisted to put Haliburton up by two goals. Warkworth then took over, scoring three goals in less than two minutes to end the period leading 3-2.

The third period was barely underway when Chris Bradford tied the game on a hard shot, assisted by Darren Johnston. Moments later Warkworth took the lead again, 4-3. Then with 6:25 left in the period Billings tied the game with an unassisted goal. End-to-end play and outstanding goaltending sent the game into a 10 minute overtime period.

Haliburton struck early as Wilson scored his second unassisted goal to give Haliburton a 5-4 lead. Strong defense and solid goaltending kept Warkworth off the sheet. Bradford's second goal, assisted by Johnston and Oliver Greer, put Haliburton up by two. Warkworth pulled their goalie but Dollo scored into the empty net at the 14 second mark, assisted by Johnston and Billings. Haliburton rounded out the win with four seconds remaining when Billings blasted a shot from the blueline to make the final score 8-4.

The boys were back in Warkworth on Sunday for game three. The home team took the lead at 11:26

Haliburton Tykes beat Minden on their own ground

Haliburton's Minor Tykes skated to a 5-1 victory on Saturday when they met on Minden's home ice.

Haliburton scored the lone goal in the first period, this one put in the net by Chris Bishop from Matthew Marlin and Dustin Prindiville. In the second period, once again Haliburton scored the only goal. This time it was Dustin Prindiville scoring, set up by Cory Sisson and Jeff Packard.

Early in the third period, Haliburton went ahead 3-0 on an unassisted goal by Jeff Packard. Minden scored with only five minutes left in the game to break Jason Chambers' shut-out bid. Haliburton came back with two more goals to finish the scoring. Cory Sisson scored Haliburton's 4th goal, with Jeff Packard assisting. Then just a minute later, it was Jeff Packard scoring his second goal of the game with Cory Sisson returning the favour by assisting.

The team as a whole put out a good effort with everybody contributing, playing good offense and defence.

PeeWees give it their best shot in an important do or die game

The Keith Jackson Real Estate PeeWees travelled to Beaverton on Sunday for a do or die game. Haliburton trailed the 3 out of 5 series two games to one.

Jackie Morrison led off the scoring at 6:28 of the first period on a set up by Mike Hartwick and Tim Keefer. Morrison had been moved up to left wing in an effort to add more scoring punch. It paid off when he sailed in on the wing and fired a blast over the netminder's shoulder.

The one goal margin held up because of strong defensive play by Curtis Bain, Curtis Reynolds, Tim Stouffer and Matt Galbraith anchored by Brock Glendinning's superb goaltending.

Jim O'Neill, Mike Hartwick, Derek Glendinning, Jon Hebert, Jackie Morrison and Tim Keefer did excellent jobs of penalty killing.

With 45 seconds left to play, Derek Glendinning took a pass from Tim Keefer, beat one Beaverton defender and slid a pass past another into the empty Beaverton net.

Haliburton prevailed 2-0 as Brock Glendinning collected the shutout.

The deciding game of this series was held in Haliburton at 7:00 p.m. on Tuesday February 5. Haliburton has won all its games in Beaverton and Beaverton has won all its games in Haliburton, and it's hoped this pattern was successfully broken.

Midgets need a win on Saturday

of the first, but Haliburton came right back at 10:03 to tie the game at one, Johnston scoring from Jason Reynolds and Billings. Warkworth took the lead again at 7:54 to end the first period leading 2-1.

Haliburton scored the only goal of the second period to even the score at two all.

Quality goaltending kept Haliburton off the scoresheet in the third period while Warkworth netted two more, making the final score 4-2. Haliburton trails the series 2-1 and must win this Saturday night at the Dysart arena to keep their hopes alive. The match gets underway at 8:30. Game five, if necessary, will be back in Warkworth on Sunday.

Opening game amazing event

THIS WEEK IN THE M.H.L.

by: CHIP TRUEMAN

A FEW MONTHS BACK, someone approached me with a real brainteasing question. It has been plaguing me ever since. Let's see if some of you fans might have the answer. If you were to put peanut butter on a slice of bread and then accidentally drop it, it always lands peanut butter side down, sticking to the floor—right? Okay, now if you take a cat and drop it, it always lands on its feet—right? What would happen if you took a slice of bread with peanut butter on it and tied it to the cat's back and then dropped it. Which side would land first??? Food for thought—no pun intended! Alright, let's get on with it . . .

What a game Sunday's opener was! Ladies and gentlemen this was hot. Let me set the scene. Emmerson Lumber enters the game with a 1 and 1 record and needs a win to keep their playoff hopes alive. Their opponents, Vasey Insurance, are 2 and 0 and want to keep their winning streak streaking. Okay, so the referee drops the puck and all heck breaks loose. Final score at the buzzer . . . Vaseys 5—Emmersons 4. The time of the last goal was 17:19. That means that the last 13 minutes of this game were scoreless! Outstanding dudes! Too bad for this lad. Kevin Phillips, John Little, Steve Smith and Carl Rowbotham helped their team win. Derrell Stamp, Tony Scheffee, Roy Scott and Craig Burk helped their team come close.

Game two was an odd affair. Curry Motors looked like they were going to rack up an easy win against Haliburton Lumber, but the lumbermen came storming back to tie the game 5—5 early in the third. However, it was an accomplishment that would not last as the motormen struck for "four in four". That's right — four unanswered goals in four minutes. This had a detrimental effect on the losing team. And so, thanks to Chris Hodgson (that hat), Ron Perrin, Hardy Kraft, Steven Barker and Rhys Jenkins, Curry Motors are now 2 and 1. Just the opposite for Haliburton Lumber though, as they slip to 1 and 2. Lumbermen goal getters on this night included Ron Yake with a pair, Craig Carpenter with two as well, and Billy Whittaker with a loner.

Bishop and Wilson (now 0 and 3) certainly gave Roberts-Austin Fuels (2 and 1) a run for their money on the eve of February third. Ya, ya Roberts-Austin won the game 8—4, but the action was closer than the final score indicates. As a matter of fact Bishop and Wilson had the lead on two separate occasions. But I suppose that doesn't mean much in this cruel "winner take all" bloodsport we have all come to know and love. Oh, uh excuse me for rambling. Uh, yes here we are, Tran Larue, Kelly Mitchell and Bruce Cawker netted B and W's goals, while R-A's came from Phil Barry, Wade MacIness, Rod Sisson, Steve Roberts and Erin Nichols.

Elstone Motors is not a nine o'clock team. It's a fact. Youngdale's Fuels used this to their advantage as they pulled off one of the biggest upsets of the year. That's right fans. I kid you not — Youngdale's narrowly defeated Elstone Motors 9—7. I know, I know, I couldn't believe it either,

IT GOES LIKE THIS: Novice curlers were well pleased with a clinic held last Saturday at the Haliburton Curling Club. Although some of them worried they wouldn't be able to follow instructor Jon Lansdowne's motions — he was a few years younger — all benefitted from learning how to improve their technique.

Novices ride out a rollercoaster

It was a weekend of highs and lows for the Haliburton OMHA Nicholls Novice Huskies. The team was high heading into the Bobcaygeon 16-team Novice tournament.

The first low came when they arrived at a frosty Bobcaygeon arena early Saturday morning and learned that team captain and leader Mike Craigen had come down with the flu and would be missing. They sank a little lower as they took to the ice to face a unknown but impressive team from Peterborough. Peterborough made it worse as they scored two quick goals. But the Huskies played with a new found intensity and all gave an extra effort to recover and win the game. Kenny Ablett was the leader as he scored a natural hat trick. Mike Morissette and Greg Forgrave each added two goals. The Huskies let up in the last two minutes of the game allowing Peterborough to score two meaningless goals. Thus the game was not nearly as close as the final score of 7 to 5 indicated. The victory and the high were all Haliburton's. Assists in the game went to Morissette with four, Forgrave three, Ryan Wood three, Devon

An Important
Message to Employers and Parents

New labour law now entitles mothers and fathers of new-born and newly adopted children to parental leave. This leave can be up to 18 weeks long. To qualify, employees must have been with the same employer for at least 13 weeks.

Parental leave can be taken in addition to 17 weeks pregnancy leave. The qualifying employment period for pregnancy leave has been reduced and is now 13 weeks before the expected birth date.

While the employer is not required to pay the employee during parental or pregnancy leave, the new law requires that the employee's seniority and certain benefits continue during these leaves. The employee has the right to return to his or her job and to be paid at least the same wage as was earned before leave began.

Details of unemployment insurance benefits can be obtained from the nearest Canada Employment Centre.

For further details of parental or pregnancy leave, see the Blue Pages of your telephone book and call the nearest Employment Standards Office, listed under Ontario Ministry of Labour, or call (toll-free): 1-800-387-2648.

NORDIC TRAILS

by 'SNOITT SWEETZER'

EARLY ONE MORNING last week, I was gliding swiftly along my favorite trail when I noticed a peculiar imprint embedded in the freshly fallen snow. As I bent down to inspect the sight, a bright object suddenly appeared at the crest of the hill and was charging at me at breakneck speed. It seemingly flew above the snow, expertly pushing its legs out from side to side. Before I could leap out of the way, this thing ran into me, knocking me ten feet in the air. Fortunately, I landed on it. This object was made of outlandishly bright colours that were so shiny they seemed to spring out at me. Amidst these colours were words new to the English language like karhu and kneissel.

I knew I was taking a big chance by staying this long to examine my attacker. I knew the consequences if it were to wake up and see me but I had to stay a little longer — my curiosity was getting the best of me. It had been a long time since I have seen anything but animals and birds. Life can be lonely when you live in the deep, rugged, snow-covered crevices of our great county.

Suddenly, this thing came to life. It was then I learned, after our lengthy discussion, this thing was a skier. Not just a regular skier but a 1990's skier. One who no longer skied in the backwoods for food like they did in my day but for something they call

Twelve rinks compete in Wilberforce

Another fun filled weekend was spent at the Monmouth Curling Club February 1 and 2 when 12 teams of firefighters and friends competed in the 8th Annual Monmouth Firefighters' Bonspiel.

Teams were entered from Oakwood, Bancroft,

Maynooth, Monmouth, Cardiff, Bicroft and Glamorgan.

Three main events had trophies up for grabs. The Reg Schofield Trophy for overall winner of the bonspies went to the Oakwood rink of Wyatt Barnes, Barry Agnew, Bev Benson and Phil Beard.

The Monmouth No. 2 rink of Max Walsh, Gerry Solmes, Reg Schofield and Larry Street gained second place over the third place finishers, the Glamorgan No. 1 foursome of Craig Pettit, Doug Bates, Lorne Wagg and Roy Cann.

The real battle came for the last place trophy, The Lorne Ray Memorial Trophy, finally won by Cardiff No. 1 over Cardiff No. 2. Winning members were Ron Milne, Bill Donaldson, Sherry Smith and Mark Slawski.

The final trophy of the spiel was the "Chief's Challenge" being held for the 6th year and donated by Direct Fire & Safety. Paul Armstrong from Bancroft won in the final shootout with Bill Foote of Bicroft.

Special thanks were given to all the volunteers who worked and donated food for the weekend. The appreciation of the efforts of the local Monmouth firefighters in their community work was made quite evident by the fact that 27 individual sponsors helped to make the bonspiel a roaring success.

Novices taste sweet victory, disheartening loss

Dart two and Ablett one.

A low followed as the short-staffed Huskies learned that they had to face their arch rivals the Minden Monarchs in their second game. In their last meeting Minden had convincingly downed the Huskies. Minden scored first but the Huskies found that same intensity they had in their earlier game. Forgrave scored twice to give the Huskies a first period lead. Ablett traded goals with Minden in the second to keep Haliburton ahead at 3 to 2. In the third period the Huskies, including Bobby Hebert and Chris Nimigon, dug deep and checked, checked, checked. Brian Muelholland played steadily between the pipes. A sweet victory and a higher high. Assists went to Morissette with two and defencemen Dart and Jamie Johnston with one each.

The Huskies were up for their Sunday their third game on Sunday against Fenelon Falls. In their last meeting Fenelon had won but the Huskies had outplayed them. That was not to be the case this day. Captain Craigen was back but not fully recovered from the flu. The rest of the team just could not regain their level of play from the day before. At the end of two the Huskies were lucky to be down by only one goal, a 2 to 1 score. In the third Fenelon scored early and went on to dump Haliburton 6 to 2. It was disheartening loss and a real low after Saturday's high. Haliburton's scorers were Forgrave from Craigen and Morissette from Forgrave and Ablett.

but hey, it's a strange world in which we live. Well, never say die. The win improves the fuelmen's record to 2 and 1. Helping in that cause were Ken Barry (cap trick), Mike Rae (capper as well), Tom Curry, Pete Fearrey and Glen Scully. Meanwhile, the skies are darkening for the motormen. Thy slip to 1 and 2, in playoff action. The only bright spot in Sunday's game was Steve Wilcox's three goal effort. Other motormen points came from Scott Rae, Dave Hircock and Greg Bishop.

THIS WEEK

OMB won't allow new lots on 2 local lakes

No new lots will be allowed to be severed on two lake trout lakes in Haliburton County as a result of recent rulings by the Ontario Municipal Board. The Board ruled in hearings held last summer that Bob Lake in the Municipality of Anson, Hindon and Minden, and Hudson Lake in Cardiff Township have reached their capacity for development if lake trout habitat and existing water quality are to be protected.

"Lake trout lakes are a rare and precious resource and are very sensitive to development," says Al Stewart, Ministry of Natural Resources Algonquin Regional Director. "These rulings protect lake trout lakes, and are important milestones in our efforts to manage development within environmental limits."

Two hearings were held as a result of MNR appeals of land severances granted by Haliburton County Land Division Committee. Based on evidence presented by the MNR and the Ministry of the Environment, the Board ruled that water quality would be reduced and that lake trout populations would suffer if further development was allowed on either lake. Confirmation of the final ruling was made in late December.

Lake trout need clear, cold waters rich in oxygen to sustain life and support natural reproduction. Cottageing and residential development on shorelines increases the input of nutrients such as phosphorus into a lake, resulting in increased algae growth. Upon dying, algae sink to the lake bottom where they decompose. The decomposition process consumes oxygen and can reduce favourable habitat for lake trout.

"Lakes have a capacity to support a certain amount of shoreline development without harming the lake environment," says Al Stewart. "But there is an upper limit. When that threshold is reached we cannot justify approving further lot development if fish habitat and overall lake quality are to be protected."

The Board, in its decisions on Bob and Hudson Lakes, rules that the applications for consent were not in the public interest, did not conform with the Official Plan, and would not be in the best interest of the land and the associated natural resources.

"We will be working closely with municipalities to encourage habitat conservation through their official plan policies and other planning documents," says Stewart. "Conservation is the mandate of our Ministry, but the onus is on all of us to protect lake environments."

Minden road plans

Anson, Hindon and Minden is applying for $350,000 in supplementary funding to pay for improvements to the Bobcaygeon Road.

The application to the Ministry of Transportation is for: $130,000, normal supplementary, from Prentice Street to Fleming Road; $120,000 for reconstruction and highfloat, Fleming Road north to Zorjens'; $100,000 for reconstruction and highfloat paving, Scotch Line to Queen's Line. The latter three are to be part of the province's anti-recessionary program.

The municipality is also applying for a regular $20,000 supplementary grant to replace culverts on the Scotch Line.

recreation. The skier belonged to a group called the Haliburton Highlands Cross Country Ski Club. This club regularly meets for fun ski tours and social activities. Here they hone their skills and practice a new and bizarre technique called skating. Never in our Kingdom's history have we heard of this skill or had such a named Club.

This is the tale of how I was introduced to the new 1990's skier and became the emissary betwixt you and skiing in the Highlands. My column will appear bi-weekly to inform you of the best skiing in the system, upcoming events, news and tales of my journeys around the county.

Nordic Trail Notes: * The skiing in the Highlands is absolutely fabulous. We currently have a base of 40 cm and there are 200 km open and in full operation. The maintenance crew is working hard to groom and maintain the trails at their optimum best to provide you with great skiing conditions. * To find out what the skiing conditions are like and where the Piston-Bully is grooming, contact the Haliburton Highlands Nordic Trails Office at 457-1640. (at Deer Lodge Resort.) * Please remember to support the system by purchasing a pass at ticket outlets around the county. Call the Nordic Trails office for ticket outlet locations. The Haliburton Highlands Nordic Trail Association is a non-profit organization that depends on funds from Members and ticket sales to maintain and promote the system.

Trail patrollers are out on a regular basis through all parts of the trail system. Skiers without passes will be asked to purchase a $7. ticket or will be required to leave the trail system immediately. Anyone who wants to earn a little extra cash and be a trail patroller or a ticket seller in their spare time please call Ray Langdon at 457-1402.

Lodge to Lodge skiing is underway and to date all have been successful tours. Articles on Lodge to lodge skiing have appeared in the Globe and Mail newspaper and Cottage Life Magazine. This exposure has generated approximately 800 inquiries on the program and our area. The Lodge to Lodge Ski Program is looking for tour leaders to guide the tours; for further information please contact the Nordic Trails Office.

On February 16, there will be a Haliburton Winter Carnival Cross Country Ski Tour which will begin on the main street of Haliburton at 11:30 a.m. The tour is 8 or 6 kms. in length and there are ten categories. There are great prizes to be won that have been donated by Haliburton County businesses for this race. Registration is on race day between 11:00 a.m. and 11:15 a.m. and there is no fee. For further information please call Dr. Bob Heyes at 457-1212.

Dealing with life's surprises

Although being tied to a dialysis unit three times a day has kept Phurness Watt close to home, he's glad his kidneys waited until he was 75 before they failed him

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

RARELY DOES LIFE WORK out the way we planned. Just ask Phurness Watt of Haliburton.

"I wanted to do something like that," he says, watching his trash being hauled away by neighbour.

After Mr. Watt retired 10 years ago, he had intended to follow the example of his neighbour and perhaps start up a small haulage business. But any future plans he may have had were immediately altered when he suffered kidney failure a year and half ago. As a result, Mr. Watt must now undergo a complicated system of home dialysis three times a day, with a tube permanently inserted into his abdomen.

"At least it let me finish my career before it happened," he says.

To support his wife Marjorie and their five children, Mr. Watt spent 27 years working as a salesman for a large grocery store chain. He thought nothing of working hard to provide for his family and following his retirement at 65, bought a trailer in Florida.

"I used to do some work in a nearby park there," he says, remembering the time fondly. It was here in the winter of 1988 that Mr. Watt discovered something was terribly wrong with his body.

"There was this guy on TV talking about the blood pressure medicine I was taking, and about how a person taking it could come down with kidney failure."

Upon arriving home in Haliburton, Mr. Watt immediately checked with his local doctor who confirmed his worst fear — there was a problem with his kidneys. Mr. Watt was sent to see a specialist at the Toronto General Hospital.

"I think I must have been the first person in the county to have this problem develop like this," he says.

For the next several months he was put through a series of tests which would require him to be taken to Toronto General every few weeks. "I still didn't know what trouble I was in."

Then in July of 1989 he was admitted Toronto General where he would spend the next three months undergoing and recovering from a delicate operation to allow him to live with Peritoneal Dialysis.

In this system, a tube or catheter enters the patient's abdomen through a small opening near the naval. Through this tube, the patient's peritoneal cavity (in the abdomen) is filled with a specially prepared dialysate fluid. Left in the cavity for several hours at a time, the fluid removes waste products and excess water from the body. Once it is drained and dumped, more fluid is inserted and the process continues.

The number of times this must be done in a day depends on the patient. Mr. Watt requires three exchanges a day, one at 7 a.m., another around 2:30 p.m., and the final one near 10 p.m.

Originally he had to make five exchanges a day, but it was reduced to three last October. "I think I might be able to go to two a day," he says confidently. "It all depends on how my blood and urine samples come out."

"You see that, now that's a clear bag," says Mr. Watt's wife Marjorie, examining the clear bag of waste fluid Mr. Watt has just removed from his body. "If there was an infection, it would be kind of foggy."

Examining each bag following an exchange has now become second nature to Mrs. Watt.

"Automatically I check the bags," she says. "I have just learned to live with it."

Assisting her husband cope with his condition required Marjorie to take some training. But generous help is provided by the Kidney Foundation, the VON and Homemakers.

Regardless of this help, Mrs. Watt admits even more outside intervention has been provided.

"I'll swear the man upstairs has brought me through this," she says. "I have always been like this. When there is an emergency, I just seem to know what to do and when to do it."

"You can't run from these kinds of things. I'm just thankful I have enough strength in my life to do things for him."

Mr. Watt agrees with his wife's reasoning. "This is something you have to live with," he says. "I'm just thankful that I don't have to live with a great deal of pain."

"Your only pain is me, right Phurnie?" jokes Mrs. Watt.

While they are optimistic, the Watts admit the illness has altered their lifestyle, causing them to make some adjustments. This includes selling their trailer in Florida.

'At least it let me finish my career before it happened,' says Phurness Watt, above, who's grateful for his wife Marjorie's support. 'I know I can handle this for the rest of my life.'

"I can't run off on the spur of the moment anymore. I have to remember I have to go home to dialysis so I can only visit somebody for so long," says Mr. Watt, adding that being 75 means you are already generally inactive in many ways. His wife doesn't agree.

"When you retire you shouldn't have to feel bad. You should be able to get up and go." This is why she insists Mr. Watt leaves the house at least two hours every day to visit friends at a local restaurant.

"It's boring to have to look at one face all day," she says smiling. This is why she says it's imperative for him to keep in touch with the community. "I think some of his friends may be a little scared to see him. When they would visit, sometimes he would cry because he was so happy to see them."

Phone calls from their children or grandchildren can also lead to tears, says Mrs. Watt, but between the medication and her husband's personality, it's understandable.

"You have to remember this is a man who has had the flu maybe twice in his life. So to be tied the house like this is very hard."

But there are other types of dialysis which allow patients to live a more active life. One is Hemodialysis in which the patient's blood is run through a machine and cleaned at least three times a week. Another type is Continuous Cycling Peritoneal Dialysis, which uses a machine and works the same as Watt's manual method.

The patient can keep this machine at home and would not have to travel to a hospital as with the first treatment. (As of January 4th, local dialysis patients can now have their blood cleansed in Peterborough's new dialysis satellite service set up in conjunction with Toronto Hospital and the VON). Mr. Watt refused these methods.

"Having to depend on a machine is too much of a nuisance," he says. "A Cyclor machine takes up a lot of room. We might be able to fit it in the bedroom if we were to take out the sewing machine."

"Take out my machine?" says Mrs. Watt winking.

A kidney transplant is perhaps a more permanent solution for some patients, but not for Mr. Watt.

"If the doctor was to call tomorrow and offer a transplant I might be tempted to take it," he says smiling. But he adds the rejection factor is too high and chances are he would not survive.

"I know I can handle this for the rest of my life," he says. "There is no reason I can't live a good long life."

Marjorie agrees and is already planning some trips once the good weather arrives. "We are going to spend time on the road. I know I can find a way to hang that bag up in the car," she says, looking at her husband. "Where there's a will there's a way."

'It's a feeling of total elation,' Steve Berry says of what it's like to reach the summit of Kilimanjaro. 'It's such an amazing view.'

Sitting on the top of Mount Kilimanjaro...

Mountain perch offers stunning view of Africa

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

THERE ARE A FEW age-old questions in this world, one of which was tactfully answered near the turn of the century by British explorer George Leigh Mallory. When asked his reason for wanting to scale Mount Everest, Mallory uttered "Because it's there."

With a few variations, this simplistic answer has been used by countless mountain climbers to explain what motivates them to seek the summit.

Stephen Berry of Minden uses a similar answer to explain his recent ascent of Mt. Kilimanjaro in the heart of Africa two weeks ago.

"I like the outdoors and you have to be somewhat of an outdoors person," he says. "You have to be comfortable in harsh situations."

But who can consider standing on an icy mountain peak 20,000 feet above sea level after a three-day climb harsh? How about half of the climbers who attempt to scale Kilimanjaro.

"Less than 50 per cent accomplish it," he says. "I saw at least 12 people being carried off."

Compared to other famous climbs — Everest, The Eiger, Alaska's Mt. McKinley — Kilimanjaro is not a technical climb. Anyone who is healthy and adventurous can attempt it. But altitude sickness is a major risk, and it chooses its victims at random.

"It has nothing to do with how physically fit you are, or your age," says the 44 year-old. Initial symptoms include headaches, digestive difficulties, extreme fatigue and shortness of breath. More serious effects can cause a climber's lungs or brain to fill with fluid. Without prompt and appropriate treatment, altitude sickness can result in death.

Berry's climbing companion and others in their party were afflicted by it, but he was not. He and two fellow climbers managed to make it to the summit from a midway point up the mountain in a gruelling 16-hour, 32-km trek. The last 8-km stretch included a 3000-foot altitude gain.

"It's a feeling of total elation," he says about reaching the top. "It's such an amazing view."

He was able to stare down a 30-mile slope of the

Girl Guides travel the world at camp

WILBERFORCE NEWS

by: WINNIE SCHOFIELD

Wonderful things take place at Camp Adelaide during the Girl Guides Winter camp out. This year the girls embarked on an exciting trip to Mexico, Kenya, Australia and Japan. Preparation included procuring passports and air line tickets, travellers cheques and hotel reservations. Before boarding the plane they lined up for baggage check which caused an anxious moment when a loud ticking was heard, that upon investigation turned out to be an alarm clock that went off when pulled from the bag. Time to board arrived which was lucky for some girls with first class tickets who enjoyed all the perks such as special treats and pop while those in economy section made do with sparse fare and water. An attractive air-line hostess, looking surprisingly like one of the guide leaders, gave instructions on buckling up, applying masks etc.

The girls quickly learned how to change money at each country as they booked into hotels and sampled strange foods. Transportation, especially in the desert, was made difficult when dealing with a crabby bus driver. All this took place in one day and will always be remembered as a big adventure.

We were all sorry to hear that Jim Ross had died. He was with us for some twenty years and earned the respect and esteem of all who knew him. He cared for others and was a great community worker. When the Monmouth Senior Citizen Club began operating in the Lloyd Watson Centre in 1975, Jim Ross was the first President. He served as church warden at St. Margaret's Anglican Church for many years. He was generous in his donations to the annual Firemen's Christmas party and also supplied fruit and candies for the school children's concert. He was a fine gentleman and we were lucky to have had him in our midst. Sympathy is extended to his wife Millie and other members of the family.

Vic Poulin, who organizes the annual Trail Blazer 50-50 Poker Run, is very pleased with this year's 6th snowmobile event that saw 484 entries and some 460 machines in use. The run took off from the Lloyd Watson Centre and most completed the course. An unlucky few, due to mechanical problems, were left behind on the trail and those coming in last had difficulty with mush, no doubt caused by the mild temperature. Winner of the big prize of $6,050 was Barbara Vekker of Ottawa who was staying at a cottage on Farquhar Lake. Vic says that discussion about prize money will result in a change next year that will divide the money available into several prizes. Thanks to all who helped, the Minor Hockey group, who provided a substantial breakfast and the efforts of the snowmobile club members who made this a most successful day.

Good news for this week. A new grandson for Ross and Ruth Casey of Wilberforce arrived at the North York General Hospital on Jan. 11th 1991. This handsome little fellow weighed 8 lb. and is a first child for Brenda and Joe Artibello. He has been named Stephen Joseph and his other happy grandparents are John and Leana Artibello of Toronto.

The Monmouth Firemen held their 8th annual Bonspeil on Feb. 2nd. This was also the 6th annual Chief's Challenge. The winning curlers came from Oakwood. They were skipped by Wyatt Barnes and team players were Barry Agnew, Bev Benson and Phil Beard. They won the Reg Schofield trophy.

Monmouth second-place winners with rink skipped by Max Walsh were: Gerre Solmes, Reg Schofield and Larry Street.

Glamorgan, skipped by Craig Petit, were curlers Doug Bates, Lorne Wagg and Roy Cann.

Last place and winners of the Lorne Ray Memorial Trophy, Cardiff 1 under skip Ron Milne, Bill Donaldson, Sherry Smith and Mark Slawski.

Winner of the Chief's Challenge with trophy from Direct Fire and Safety was Paul Armstrong of Bancroft in a tie breaker against Bill Foote from Bicroft. Thanks to many sponsors for donated prizes and to all 48 curlers. Very much appreciated was help from the ladies and gentlemen in the kitchen and the donation of food.

There are all kinds of wonderful activities going on this coming week-end that will be taking place in Gooderham, Wilberforce, Harcourt and Highland Grove. At the Lloyd Watson Centre in Wilberforce there is a euchre party being held on Friday night at 8 p.m. There is a hockey party at the Arena and many more events planned for your enjoyment. More information about this can be found in this issue of the Echo and in bills posted at all the stores.

Sunrise at Kilimanjaro an unforgettable sight

volcanic peak, out onto the plains of Africa - Kenya to the north, Tanzania to the south.

Despite this sight, it was the sunrise Berry will always remember.

Due to the logistics of other parties scaling Kilimanjaro, much of Berry's climb was done at night and he reached the summit as the sun rose over the horizon.

"Seeing the sunlight break from above the peaks is quite a spectacular sight," he says, drifting back to that moment. Being 50 miles south of the equator, the sun was situated directly overhead and the clouds lingered close to 8000 feet below.

This climb compared to nothing Berry has accomplished previously, and over the last several years he has had many other adventures. "I did the Grand Canyon climb a couple of years ago. That was quite substantial," he says.

But it was the six expeditions he and long-time climbing companion Richard Harding made in New York's Adirondack mountains that prepared them to tackle Kilimanjaro.

As an extra precaution, Berry dropped 16 pounds before he left for the Kilimanjaro climb.

"No one told me to lose the weight," he says. "I just knew it was something I'd have to do."

Although he agrees having the right equipment was essential to making a successful climb, Berry says little preparation went in to actually planning the trip.

"I researched the climb two years ago," he says. "We put the whole thing together in about a month."

"I'm sort of a person who goes by the seat of their pants. Whatever happens, happens."

In the true spirit of adventure, he and Harding waited until they stepped off the plane in Nairobi before hiring a guide and porters to take them up the mountain. They found these men with the help of cab driver outside the airport. "So far, wherever I have gone there has always been a helpful taxi driver," jokes Berry.

The men also hooked up with a Dutch couple and a professional climber from Italy and together the five set off. Unfortunately the Dutch couple were forced to suspend their climb midway when altitude sickness became too much of a strain.

"They weren't too happy about it," Berry recalls. "The Italian climber wants me to climb Mont Blanc (a 15,000 foot peak in France). Possibly I'd do that."

His trek on Kilimanjaro was followed by a three-day safari through Kenya which, to say the least, was an eye-opening experience. "Africa is far more civilized than you would think."

Maybe a little too civilized, he adds, recalling the sight of a group of Kenya's Masai dressed in their traditional garb viewing a video. "Of all the strange things. Here was a group of Masai standing in the lobby of a 5-star hotel on the edge of the Serengeti Plain watching Psycho on VHS."

Despite the contrasts between traditional ways of life and the trappings of western society, Berry says a certain mystique about Africa endures. "It's still a very beautiful landscape."

SECOND PLACE WINNERS: This Wilberforce rink of Larry Street, Reg Schofield, Max Walsh and Gerri Solmes came in second in the weekend's Wilberforce bonspeil.

THIRD PLACE WINNERS: This Glamorgan rink of Lorne Wagg, Doug Bates, Craig Petit and Roy Cann (absent) captured the third-place trophy in Wilberforce.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY MOM: A capacity crowd filled the West Guilford Chapel to wish Lorna Stackhouse, centre, a happy 80th birthday on Sunday. With her, from

Lorna Stackhouse honoured as people gather for her 80th birthday celebration

W. GUILFORD NEWS

by: ELEANOR COOPER

A large and wonderful birthday party was held on Sunday, Feb. 3 at the West Guilford Chapel to honor Lorna Stackhouse on her 80th birthday. Norma Sisson, her daughter made and decorated the special cake. Flowers, candy, books, plants, an album for new pictures, and many other gifts expressed the feelings of the many guests who have appreciated Lorna's kindnesses over the years. The guest of honour was quite overcome just relating the event to me. Even the weatherman co-operated so that it was pleasant for Lorna's son, Murray Hague, his wife Sandy and daughters to make the trip from North Bay. Jimmy Cooper's poem was one of the precious gifts. The occasion was kept a surprise until the last moment. However, the whole community knew of it and responded accordingly. Refreshments in abundance were provided and everyone had a good time. We wish Lorna many more years to enjoy the gifts of health and happiness and friendship which the Lord has bestowed upon her.

Some of us missed the party because of other commitments. Leslie and David Chumbley were guests of Brenda and Steve Cowie in Burlington. Earl and I were also in Burlington at my youngest sister's, Mavis Swiston. We had gone on Friday evening to see Beth in the chorus of the production of Gilbert and Sullivan's Princess Ida, produced at St. Anne's Anglican parish hall by the St. Anne's Choral and Drama Society. It was a wonderful presentation, beautiful solo voices and orchestra to enhance the work.

A late note of sympathy to the daughters of Audrey Prentice who died on Jan. 13, 1991. Barbara Edwards and Susan Brodie who arranged the funeral service taken by Maurice Bradley at Gooderham on Jan. 16. It was evident by the numbers who went to express sympathy at the funeral home that West Guilford has remembered kindly both Mac and Audrey Prentice over the years.

Already the concert series is set for next year. At the Anton Kuert's concert on April 14 at the Legion, tickets will be available for the 1991-92 series. "Letters from Wingfield Farm" is one of the 1991-92 items, an amusing look at how to settle in the country (how to survive!) after having lived always in the city. A Russian pianist will do justice to our excellent concert grand, and the Amadeus Ensemble will begin the series in December.

Homemaker was alert to woman's distress

Flo Alton suffered a stroke on Jan. 16 and has been in hospital, where she is making a good recover. When her homemaker tried to get into Flo's apartment, Flo was unable to open the door, and the homemaker heard her moans so got superintendent to open the door. I talked to Flo's daughter, Grace King, and she says her mom is steadily recovering and would appreciate a card from her many friends here. She is in Room 2125 at Ross Memorial Hospital.

Coleen Liscombe is recovering well following her recent surgery. Wilhemine Liscombe continues to do well after her hospital ordeal.

Little Kristen Chamberlin, five-year-old daughter of John Chamberlin of Norland, had a very terrifying experience on Wednesday January 23rd when she was attacked by a neighbour's German Shepherd dog. When Kristen and her little brother Jeremy came out of their home, the dog attacked Kristen. The little girl had one ear almost ripped off, it hung by a thread, her face, head and neck and inside her mouth literally ripped up by this dog. The high collar on her jacket probably helped to save her life as it helped protect her neck. Little Kristen had over one hundred stitches to close the wounds. Her grandmother, June (Mrs. Alan Weaver) tells me she is recovering, the very, very frightened still and she credits the Doctor at Orillia Soldiers Memorial Hospital with his expert surgery, in stitching up the many lacerations. The dog was destroyed, but the long term effect on Kristen will be evident for many, many years, and she will likely be forever terrified of a larger dog. Her brother Rod immediately screamed for help but had she been alone, who knows, but the dog might have killed Kristen.

Marion Weaver is home after surgery in hospital in Toronto.

Starting Jan. 26 we had Marion Fisher to read for us. She was reading a Danielle Steele book. We were a long time reading it because there were so many things needing attention there wasn't time for anyone to read regularly. Marion has volunteered to read for us three times a week. She finished the book.

Sunday evening Chapel Service was led by Rev. John Burgess. He has been speaking on "He is able." Alice Jones played the organ, Leon came and brought his mother Annie Jones. Thank you both sincerely.

Monday Evelyn Coleman came for Bible study. We studied, two good women and a bad one: Mary the mother of James and Joseph, Mary the mother of Mark. The third one was sometimes known as Mary of Rome.

Tuesday being such a sunny day Doris decided we could go for a bus ride in the afternoon. So Eldon Deacon could make sure he was familiar with everything he had to know to drive the bus Eldon drove the bus and Doris sat with us. Quite a change for Doris. We went via 121 to Haliburton, then to West Guilford and Carnarvon (took in the sights in both villages) and to Minden on Hwy. 35. We stopped at Kawartha for ice cream. When we went to pay we found it was on the house. We sincerely thank them at Kawartha Dairy, they are so generous with treating us so often. We appreciate it very much. We returned to Hyland Crest after a short ride down Hwy. 35 when Doris discovered we were to be back by 3:30 instead of 4 o'clock.

decorated by Pat Bradburn. The other ladies who served the tea were Wanda Carter, Jean Robson, Ann Baker, Mary Guillemain and Pat Bradburn. January we only had two birthday girls, Alice Todd and May Horsley. The tea was delicious. After the tea Doris played the piano for a short sing song. We had a guest of one resident whose birthday was Thursday, Addele McGoldrick was included with the birthday ladies. The residents thank the auxiliary ladies, Doris for the sing song and the pleasure of having Addele with us.

Thursday evening we had Marg Prentice and Ruth Travers calling bingo for us. Carrie Drysdale and a friend played for the fun of playing.

SHARING A VALENTINE'S DINNER: On Friday night, residents of Hyland Crest and their families were treated to a sumptuous roast beef dinner. Here, residents Alice Rivers and Mary McKelvey relax before dessert, and entertainment provided by pianist Bill Gliddon and singer Glenda Burk, who are favourites with everyone.

Sympathy extended

CARNARVON NEWS

Our sympathies to the Ed Turners of Foster's Store, who lost both parents within a few days of each other.

Keith Thomas is spending a week in Michigan attending the Kinsman Convention.

Well it looks as if something may be done about the return of liquor and wine bottles, and it's about time too.

Mrs. Maisie Davies of Toronto was a weekend guest of the Stan Archers.

A snowmobile accident happened on Saturday night next door to us, when a young lady ran into a wire fence between The Boathouse Restaurant and Griffin's Marina. She was taken to hospital badly lacerated.

Our sympathies and prayers to Thelda McGuire and family who lost a loving husband and father after a lengthy illness.

Monday evening we were shown films: "All About Bears", "Gopher Broke" and "Austria". Since I wasn't very well, Doris obtained the titles for me, and we thank Pat Bradburn for showing the films.

Thursday as usual, we had a tea in the auditorium. The Ladies of the Hyland Crest Auxiliary prepared the tea, and since it was the last day of January, they also brought a birthday cake. It was beautifully Craggs of Victoria Road, who passed away at his home in Friday January 25th. Frankie is a brother of Dennis here at Coby. Frankie had many friends in Coby and will be greatly missed.

Sherry Warrel and husband are home after a two week vacation in Florida, and they visited her parents, Ingram & Isobel Wessell who were already there on holiday. Irene Bartley is also home from Florida, and Dave Suckling left for Africa on Jan. 13 to visit a friend who is a priest there.

The Ladies Missionary Group of Faith Tabernacle held their January meeting at the home of Olga Weaver, with Eleanor Crane of Minden, presiding over meeting. Faye Orr supplied Music on her guitar and a number of choruses were sang. Prayer requests were made and each prayed for special requests.

The ladies Coffee Hour was held at Faith Tabernacle on Wednesday morning. Laurie Campbell reminded ladies that the Feb. 13th Coffee Hour will be "Sweetheart Coffee Hour" in honor of Valentines Day. Laurie invited those who were able to go to make plans for the ladies retreat to be held at Burlington on Feb. 22 and 23rd.

Diana Weaver introduced the speaker, Carol Morton who is President of the Lindsay Branch "Right To Life."

The school kids have started a Primary Gymnastics Club, that meets twice a week. Constable Dave Fletcher is holding a VIP course for Gr. 5 & 6, and kids are again actively into chess games, and pursue this once a week. Three girls, who understand the need to recycle, Kelly Watson, Melissa Bell and Sarah Powell, do the sorting of material brought to them.

Joyce Guiotto went to hospital on Sunday and is in Ross Memorial Hospital. A card would help cheer Joyce.

Our little neighbour, Curtis Barbour, a die-hard Maple Leaf fan, and his father Tom, journeyed to Maple Leaf Garden on Monday, Jan. 28th to watch the hockey game. Wouldn't you know, Curtis must have been a good omen, for the Leafs shone brighter then they have before all winter!

You, Me & The GST ....It's Not All BAD!

Prior to Jan. 1, 1991, our Furniture and Appliance prices included a hefty built-in Federal Sales Tax. With the implementation of the G.S.T., the old, hidden tax has been dropped allowing us to REDUCE OUR TAG PRICES. Although our products are now subject to the G.S.T., your TOTAL PURCHASE PRICE, in most cases, will be LESS THAN IT WAS in 1990.

Example: "STATUM DESIGN" - Colonial sofa & chair

|------------------------------|------------------------------|
| was ...tagged at 1329.00     | now ...tagged at 1179.00     |
| plus Prov. Tax (8%) 106.32   | plus G.S.T. (7%) 82.53       |
| Total purchase price 1435.32 | plus Prov. Tax (8%) 94.32    |
|                              | Total purchase price 1355.85 |

Pay attention to the difference on the bottom line ....AND THE BOTTOM LINE IS that our furniture and appliances become an even better investment than ever before.
